Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a satellite communication system, and more particularly to a mobile terminal used in the system. 2. Description of the Prior Art With the rapid advance of semiconductor technology and increasingly of communication technology, nowadays mobile terminals are not only used in the communication of voice, but also in sending text messages, or others in which the voice is accompanied with other data, such as picture data or image data. Therefore, the development of the mobile terminals has been with the use of multimedia data. When a user of the mobile terminal receives information sent from another party, the sending party may transmit a push notification message to the mobile terminal of the user to inform him or her of the information without directly transmitting a notice to the user. The general structure of the mobile terminal of a satellite communication system is as follows. A module in the mobile terminal may be adopted to receive and decode user-pre-selected information, and then to transfer the decoded information to a user device of the user in real time for visual display. For example, if the user receives a call from another party, the mobile terminal of the user should be able to save the call before answering the call, to display the incoming calls, and to invite the caller to enter a message when the user is answered. As known by the general public, the communication structure of the prior art as described above can only be implemented by the telecommunication provider in cooperation with the user device as mentioned above. However, this structure is only for receiving information, and thus it is still very limited in the scope of application.
